

Padma Bakir

Family Medicine Idealist

Padma Bakir, a 26-year-old nurse practitioner from Dubai, UAE, is dedicated to her profession and has aspirations of pursuing a doctorate in family medicine. Her passion for healthcare extends beyond her current role; she is deeply involved in volunteering and aims to bring her expertise to the United States. Padma is committed to continuous learning.

Uses the following networks

AGE	26
TITLE	Nurse
LOCATION	Currently UAE
EDUCATION	MSN
INDUSTRY	Healthcare
PATHWAY	MD

Padma measures

- ✔ Career Advancement
- ✔ Achieving Goals
- ✔ Recognition of Quality

Fears

- ✗ Relocating away from family
- ✗ Cultural biases

Goals

- ✔ Degree in Family Medicine
- ✔ Working in the USA

Academic and Professional Background

Padma graduated from The University of Wollongong in Dubai with a MN (Master of Nursing). During her studies, she was actively involved in student organizations while also interning at a local healthcare clinic, where she gained hands-on experience working with patients. Her academic achievements and extracurricular involvement reflect her dedication to both her studies and her community. Padma volunteered at health fairs, providing basic health screenings and education to underserved populations. She also participated in research projects focused on improving patient care and outcomes, which further fueled her passion for nursing. Her commitment to service and learning has earned her recognition from both her peers and faculty.

Personal Life and Aspirations

Padma’s day-to-day activities at PHSU are dynamic, often involving unexpected challenges but her dedication and critical thinking allows her to persevere. She is passionate about creating an inclusive environment, involving committees and events to engage the community at the local hospital she works at, while still finding time to volunteer at her local community center. Padma’s dream is to work in the United States in family medicine.